

Isis Forestry's clients are mainly private landed families with large traditional mixed estates. Their woods need to be managed on a commercially viable basis, although there is usually a wider range of important considerations to be taken account of, including landscape and estate amenity, sporting and conservation interests. Other clients include farmers and smaller landowners, as well wildlife trusts and minerals companies, where the interests of the client are perhaps a little more specialised.

The company's clients have a close and trusted relationship with Graham and value the personal care and attention he gives in delivering their respective woodland objectives.

Isis Forestry works across the East and West Midlands, Eastern and Southern England, Nottinghamshire and Cambridgeshire.
